General Assumption of Risk Regarding the $HERA Staking Portal

By accessing and using our products, including the Staking Portal, you agree that you are financially and technologically sophisticated enough to manage and understand all the possible risks associated with them. You agree that you have the necessary knowledge to navigate within the Metis and Arbitrum blockchains, and you agree that you know the risks of digital assets based on a blockchain, like ETH, and so-called stablecoins, like USDC.

By accessing and using our products, including the Staking Portal, you agree that you understand the given details about the $HERA token ('HERA'; '$HERA' or; 'HERA Token') given in the documentation (<https://docs.hera.finance/hera-token/token-overview>). By accessing, you agree that you understand the terminology and details provided in the Staking Portal documentation (<https://docs.hera.finance/staking-portal>).

You agree that neither the Hera Finance Team nor any affiliates of the Hera Finance DAO control the pricing of the $HERA token and that the $HERA token price is determined by third-party buy and sell orders. You acknowledge the risk of the $HERA token losing or gaining in value. You understand the high volatility of the crypto market and thus acknowledge the risk of $HERA being volatile as well.

You acknowledge and agree that there is a risk of smart contract malfunction, as described in the Limitation of Liability.

You acknowledge and agree that the APY (average per year) provided for the Hera Single Stake Pool is fluid and can change at any given time.

You agree and understand that the $HERA token is on top of the Metis blockchain. You understand that neither the Hera Finance team nor any affiliate of the Hera Finance DAO has control over the Metis blockchain.

In summary, you agree that we are not to be held liable for any losses resulting from these risks or the Staking Portal in general.
